

ABSTRACT

An image capturing device includes at least one acceleration sensor, a display that includes a graphical selection indicator, such as a cursor, and a processor. The at least one acceleration sensor detects an acceleration along at least one axis of the image capturing device and generates an acceleration signal. The processor receives the acceleration signal and moves the graphical selection indicator in response to the acceleration signal.